Chimney Restoration One Done – and One to Do!

Last June, we had one of the Sutter-Meyer Farmhouse chimneys restored to its original structure. We used bricks that we found in the restored farmhouse well, along with additional bricks from a second chimney that had to be removed a few years back.

Here's the chimney before restoration (flanked by board member Bill Meyer, a descendant of the original Meyers after whom the house is named)

And here is how the chimney looks now, after restoration

About that second chimney: When University City purchased the Sutter-Meyer Farmhouse several years ago, the second chimney was in such bad condition that it had to be removed. But we could replace it! In fact, that is on our “bucket list” as a future project.
